WINTER 2007/08 Edition

THE Fine Print NEWSLETTER

Nearly the end of Year and we are still striving to keep up with the demands of print, as you have probably seen from our previous Newsletters we at Fine Print are growing from strength to strength and in doing so have just invested in another piece of technology.

A chemical free digital thermal platemaking system. The platemaking system will enable us to be far more environmentally friendly and will also be chemical free. We have also invested in a B2 high quality proofing system which will also be a very good addition.

With the equipment we have invested in we are hoping that we can help the environment in as many ways as possible, so if you would like to do your little bit, why not enquire about our recycled papers that we now use for many of our customers.

Every Bit Helps!

On that note I would like on behalf of everybody at Fine Print to thank you for all your custom throughout the year and have a very happy Christmas.

The future in our hands

Printing to the best of our ability, whilst maintaining the effects on our immediate and global environment.

With our constant focus to achieve a complete environmentally friendly printing process, Fine Print have entered a new revolution.

With the recent investment in a Chemical Free Digital Thermal Platemaking system, which will be installed during the month of January. This state of the art technology will help our internal workflow and effectively improve our efficiency as well as reducing the effect on our environment.

Also with the addition of a B2, high quality colour proofing system. We are able to offer you a choice of full colour hard copies, or high resolution print ready PDFs in order to sign off your printing.

Carbon Neutral Papers now available

The newest trend in eco-paper production, offsetting carbon emissions, helps to reduce the introduction of CO2 into our atmosphere even further than using renewable energy sources such as wind power.
